

Ground to Ground is a city-wide campaign that diverts nutrient-rich coffee grounds from the landfill and puts them back to work in our yards, farms, and gardens. All these locations offer grounds in 4-gallon buckets, in a bucket exchange program, or disposable bags. Take as many buckets of grounds as you like (feel free to take all of them from any location), and then RINSE the buckets and RETURN them within a couple days. <http://austingroundtoground.org>, info@austingroundtoground.org

How to Use:

- Incorporate directly into garden - up to 25% volume of your soil.
- FOR ORGANIC SYSTEMS Add them to the compost bin – they’ll heat it up fast. Follow organic guidelines.
- Sprinkle on lawn.
- Make a perimeter to guard against snails and slugs.

We all know coffee is black gold for the garden. Here’s the breakdown:

- Great immediate and slow-release source of Nitrogen, Phosphorus, and Potassium.
- Contains a range of micronutrients such as Calcium and Magnesium.
- Slightly acidic – great for Austin’s alkaline soils!
- A 2012 study showed that lutein, B-carotene, and chlorophylls increased in greens proportionally to the amount of grounds sown into garden soil (0 – 20%). Biomass of harvest also increased with the addition of grounds.
- Won’t burn plants or pollute groundwater; microorganisms love grounds!
- Repels snails, slugs, pillbugs, and most cats.
